LINC HOUSING CORPORATION LAUNCHES BI-WEEKLY PODCAST "Notes from the Housing Studio" Focuses on Affordable Housing Issues

LONG BEACH, Calif., (April 27, 2006) – LINC Housing Corporation (LINC), a nonprofit developer of affordable homes for seniors and families throughout California, today announced the launch of its bi-weekly podcast. "Notes from the Housing Studio" will feature reports on affordable housing news, discussions with industry experts covering topical issues from a housing perspectives, and information aimed at demystifying housing policy.

"We want to be a resource for the industry as well as those who are interested in learning more about how affordable housing is an integral part of successful communities," said Hunter L. Johnson, president of LINC. "Podcasting is gaining popularity quickly. We see this medium as an opportunity to help raise awareness about the most recent developments in housing - an important issue that affects every Californian in ways many don't even realize."

The podcast series kicks-off today with the first episode, "Top Housing Issues in 2006." Special guest G. Allan Kingston, president and CEO of Century Housing Corporation and an industry visionary, talks with Johnson about top priorities in the industry for 2006. Other upcoming episodes will highlight employer assisted housing, the Kelo Decision, smart growth and permanent funding sources for affordable housing.

"Notes from the Housing Studio" can be accessed at www.linchousing.org/podcast. For those new to podcasting, the web site provides step-by-step instructions on how to download and subscribe to LINC's podcast series.
